

Copyright case: Johnson v. New Destiny Christian Center Church Inc., USA

Kluwer Copyright Blog
September 21, 2020

Deirdre Kennedy

Please refer to this post as: Deirdre Kennedy, 'Copyright case: Johnson v. New Destiny Christian Center Church Inc., USA', Kluwer Copyright Blog, September 21 2020, <http://copyrightblog.kluweriplaw.com/2020/09/21/copyright-case-johnson-v-new-destiny-christian-center-church-inc-usa-2/>

---

Pastor and church who sent YouTube DMCA takedown notices for videos of sermons posted on operator's channel had good faith belief that videos were infringing.

An ongoing dispute between a church and its pastor and a YouTube channel operator has been put to rest by the U.S. Court of Appeals in Atlanta, which affirmed the district court's grant of summary judgment in favor of the church and pastor, finding that it was not shown that they made a knowing misrepresentation of copyright infringement nor that there had been an abuse of process. Accordingly, the channel operator could not go forward with misrepresentation claims under the Digital Millennium Copyright Act (Johnson v. New Destiny Christian Center Church, Inc., September 4, 2020, per curiam).

Case date: 04 September 2020

Case number: No. 19-11070

Court: United States Court of Appeals, Eleventh Circuit

A full summary of this case has been published on Kluwer IP Law.