Kluwer Copyright Blogger · Friday, August 12th, 2016

We hope all our readers are having a lovely summer!

To give you a bit of a challenge and test your copyright knowledge, we've put together this fun copyright quiz, with a prize for the winner. To take part, click on the image below:

The image shows a screenshot of a quiz interface. At the top, there is a blue header with the text "Kluwer Copyright Quiz". Below the header, the first question is displayed in blue text: "1. What is the difference between a dentist office's waiting room and a rehabilitation center?". There are four radio button options listed below the question:

- (a) The music played in a dentist's office is not a communication to the public but the broadcast of television programmes in a rehabilitation center is.
- (b) The music played in a dentist's office is background music but the music featured in television programmes in a rehabilitation center is not.
- (c) The patients of a rehabilitation center willingly listen to music by Amy Winehouse, but the patients of a dental practice do not consciously choose to do so.
- (d) The operator of a rehabilitation center must be considered to be intervening deliberately in the broadcasting of protected works, but a dentist must not.

The deadline for entries is midnight CET on 14 September. All correct answers will be entered into a draw and the lucky winner will receive a selected Kluwer Law International publication.

Good luck!
