France: Bouygues Télécom, Conseil d'Etat, 383110, 31 December 2015

Brad Spitz (REALEX) · Friday, September 2nd, 2016

The Conseil d'Etat, the French administrative Supreme Court, ordered the French Prime Minister to take regulatory measures to indemnify the ISPs (Internet service providers) for the costs incurred when the HADOPI Commission requires them to provide information relating to internet users who have or are likely to have infringed copyright law.
